Today, the learned Assistant Public Prosecutor (APP) appeared and submitted that after careful scrutiny of the police record and available evidence, he is of the view that the instant challan does not disclose sufficient evidence to proceed against the accused. He recommended that the challan be discharged on the ground that the prosecution has failed to comply with the mandatory provisions of law regarding the handling of the recovered contraband.

The learned APP contended that the alleged recovery was neither sealed nor properly packed on the spot as required under the law, nor was any safe custody of the recovered items ensured thereafter. Furthermore, the same were not promptly sent to the Chemical

Examiner/Expert for analysis. Such omissions have rendered the alleged recovery doubtful and have caused an irreparable defect in the chain of custody of the case property, which is fatal to the prosecution case.

Furthermore, the alleged recovery was effected from the accused, however, the investigating officer failed to seal the recovered items at the spot. There is no mention of any seal impression, nor any memo showing that the seized property was deposited in malkhana in safe custody. The record also does not reflect that the sample or recovered material was ever dispatched to the Chemical Examiner/Expert for report within a reasonable time. These lapses clearly amount to violation of the mandatory requirements of law, which are essential to maintain the sanctity of the case property and to establish a continuous chain of custody.

It is a settled principle of law that when the prosecution fails to establish the safe custody of recovered items and the link evidence from the time of recovery till chemical examination, the entire case becomes doubtful and cannot be safely relied upon for conviction. The burden lies on the prosecution to prove every link of the chain beyond reasonable doubt, which in the instant case, is completely missing.

In view of the above deficiencies and in light of the recommendation made by the learned APP, this court is of the considered view that there is no sufficient material on record to proceed further against the accused. Continuing the trial in such circumstances would serve no useful purpose and would amount to abuse of the process of law.

Accordingly, the instant challan is hereby discharged. The accused namely Muhammad Ullah is hereby discharged from the instant case. The accused is on bail. His bail bonds stand cancelled. Sureties are discharged from the liabilities of the bail bonds.

File be consigned to the record room after due completion and compliance.
